STREET ART AROUND THE WORLD

Modern graffiti began in big cities in the United States in the 1970s. In New York, young people wrote their names, or “tags”, in pen on walls around the city. One of the first “taggers” was a teenager called Demetrius. His tag was TAKI183. He wrote his tag on the walls and in the subway stations in New York. Other teenagers saw Demetrius’s tag and started writing their tags too. Soon, there were tags on walls, buses and trains all over New York.

Then, some teenagers started writing their tags with aerosol paint. Their tags were bigger and more colourful. Aerosol paint graffiti became very popular in the 1970s and 1980s. It appeared on trains, buses and walls all around the world. In the 1990s and 2000s, a lot of graffiti artists started painting pictures. Some artists’ pictures were about politics. Other artists wanted to make cities beautiful and painted big, colourful pictures on city walls.

In some countries, writing or painting on walls is a crime. Sometimes, graffiti artists have problems with the police in these countries. In other countries, artists can draw and paint in certain places. For example, in Taiwan, there are “graffiti zones” where artists can paint on walls. In Sao Paulo in Brazil, street artists can paint pictures on walls and houses. Their pictures are colourful and beautiful. Some tourists visit Sao Paulo just to see the street art!

In Bristol in the UK, for example, there is a street art festival in August every year. Artists paint all the buildings in a street. Lots of people travel from across the UK to watch the artists and take photos of the pictures. You can see exhibitions of street art in some galleries too. Today there have been exhibitions of street art in galleries in Paris, London and Los Angeles.

Who are the artists? Some street artists have become famous. Here are three stars of the street art world: Os Gemeos are twin brothers from Sao Paulo. They paint big, colourful pictures of people on buildings. In 2007, they painted a castle in Scotland! The other is Blek le Rat from Paris. He is famous for painting pictures of homeless people in big cities. One more artist is Faith47 who is from Cape Town in South Africa. She paints big, colourful pictures of people and animals. She likes painting in different places and you can find her work on pavements, postboxes, buses and, of course, on walls!

Many street artists use the Internet to look at photos of street art from around the world. They communicate with other artists online and share ideas. Some street artists are famous and you can see their pictures in galleries. We don't know about the future of street art, but it is here to stay for sure!

A SIMPLE WAY TO HELP THE EARTH

Many people still don't think that recycling is necessary. Sometimes, it feels like too much work to choose which bin to put our trash in and to have many bins to empty. But really, separating our trash is not that hard and only takes a few minutes. In some places, people get money for things they recycle, like plastic and glass bottles.

What we can recycle varies in different places. In Reading, my hometown in the UK, I can recycle paper, cardboard, plastic and glass bottles, cans, and batteries. When I moved to university in Chester, I learnt that there I could also recycle clothes, shoes, electrical items, ink cartridges, mobile phones, plastic pots, and foil. I also had a compost bin for food waste like meat, fish, fruit, vegetables, tea bags, and garden waste. Now I live in Melilla, on the north coast of Africa. Here I can only recycle paper, cardboard, and glass. It's hard for me to throw something away when I know I could recycle it somewhere else.

Sometimes it's hard to understand why recycling helps the Earth. The main idea is that recycling saves the energy that would otherwise be needed to produce waste products again. Production and other polluting factors like transport are increasing harmful gases in the atmosphere, raising global temperatures. This results in weather changes in some areas, leading to natural disasters and problems in farming and agriculture.

The saddest part is that the most affected areas are the developing countries that don't have enough money or resources to recycle waste like we do. Also, many people believe that a change in global temperature is natural and has happened throughout history. While that's true, it's been scientifically proven that human activity causing global warming affects climate change. The global temperature is rising quickly, and soon we may not be able to live in certain parts of the world because of extreme weather.

The world is already overpopulated, and as a result we may not have enough space. Nobody wants to live next to a landfill. Packaging is included in the price of products we buy, and putting them in a landfill wastes resources and money.

Plastic bags are a good example. Why do we get a plastic bag every time we go to the shop? In some places, people have to pay for plastic bags, so using a reusable bag can save both money and resources. It's also easier because plastic bags don't last long and aren't easy to carry.

Moreover, making items from wood, card, and paper causes deforestation, destroying animals' habitats and making them endangered. Recycling paper and card can help prevent this.

There are also negative aspects to recycling as well. For example, melting old plastic down to make new items can use a lot of energy. Because of this, some cities choose to limit what they can recycle and send general waste to be burned. While this is a way to produce energy, it also causes more pollution. Despite this, as long as we keep producing more waste, environmental damage will cause more problems and we will have less resources, so we need a way out.

For most people recycling by separating our trash seems too difficult.
